

Programs for Ontario workplaces

Mental health is the leading driver of disability claims in Canada, and Ontario employers carry a legal duty of care for psychological safety. These programs train the people who determine whether that duty is met: the managers having the conversation.

The programs

Difficult Conversations and Repair

Teams leave able to name the pattern they keep falling into, and with a repair procedure they have run at least once in the room.

Audience Managers, or whole intact teams

Duration Half day (3 hours), or full day (6 hours) with extended practice labs

Format On-site across the Greater Toronto Area and southern Ontario, or virtual

Group size Capped at 25

Participants leave able to:

- Name the four interaction patterns that predict a working relationship breaking down
- Catch one of those patterns in their own behaviour mid-conversation and substitute a different move
- Run a repair conversation using a defined structure, having completed one in the session
- Raise a difficult issue without triggering defensiveness, using a tested opening

From $1,600 per half day and $2,600 per full day. Virtual delivery priced lower.

Psychologically Safe Leadership

Leaders leave able to identify which of their own routine decisions carry psychological risk, and to change one of them.

Audience People managers and senior leaders

Duration Full day (6 hours) or two half-days

Format On-site across the Greater Toronto Area and southern Ontario, or virtual

Group size Capped at 25

Participants leave able to:

- Map the thirteen psychosocial factors in CSA Z1003 against decisions they personally make
- Identify the two or three factors where their own team carries the most exposure
- Redesign one recurring management practice to reduce psychological risk, and write it down
- State what the Occupational Health and Safety Act and WSIB actually require, without overstating it

From $2,600 per full day. Virtual delivery priced lower.

The Supportive Conversation

Managers leave able to open the conversation they have been avoiding, and to close it with an agreed next step rather than an awkward silence.

Audience	Anyone who manages people, at any level	Duration	Half day (3 hours)
Format	On-site across the Greater Toronto Area and southern Ontario, or virtual	Group size	Capped at 25 so everyone practises

Participants leave able to:

- Open the conversation with an observation rather than a question, and know why that works better
- Run a short goal-directed exchange without asking for a diagnosis or a history
- Respond to a disclosure they were not expecting without freezing or over-promising
- State clearly what they can and cannot keep confidential, before the disclosure rather than after

From $1,600 per half day. Virtual delivery priced lower.

Ballast Wellbeing delivers training and education. We do not provide counselling, assessment, or treatment. Every session includes a certificate of completion showing contact hours, verifiable at ballastwellbeing.com/verify.